A Curated Example

One family. A hundred years.

The Family — A Hundred Years

Cloth-bound, foil-stamped, inset with the earliest portrait — the first page of a story that will outlast its keeper.

SPREAD · 1905

The First Portrait

Adaline and Thomas sat for this tintype on a Saturday afternoon — the earliest image we have of the family together.

SPREAD · 1925

The House on Linden Street

A new porch, a new century. The boys had grown taller than their mother by Easter.

Homecoming

Sergeant Walker returned in September, three years after he'd left. He swore later he could hardly speak.

Sundays in the Yard

*Charcoal smoke, the transistor humming Motown.
Every cousin within driving distance turned up by four.*

SPREAD · 1985

Christmas Morning

Wrapping paper to the ceiling, a Polaroid still warming in someone's hand. The pajamas were store-bought; the joy was not.

Cousins at the Coast

Five boys, one rented station wagon, a roll of disposable film. Half the photos came back blurry. This one did not.

SPREAD · TODAY

All of Us, Still Here

Four generations under one roof for an ordinary Sunday — which, looking back, will not have been ordinary at all.

Bound to endure.
